Miss Helen Taft Returns to the White House.

GOES TO CHURCH WITH MOTHER

Cards Issued Announcing Birth of a Son to Swiss Minister and Mme. Ritter at Zurich—First Secretary and Mrs. Post Wheeler Are Lunch-est Guests of Mr. and Mrs. Dodge.

Miss Helen Taft returned to the White House yesterday morning from Bryn Mawr, where she spent Saturday after a few days' visit in New York. She accompanied her mother to St. John's Episcopal Church yesterday morning. Miss Taft will be the luncheon guest of Miss Ruth Pilling, daughter of Mrs. J. C. Pilling, to-day. Miss Pilling and her daughter returned recently from their beautiful summer home at Buena Vista, where they entertained many house parties of Washington friends. They spent some weeks in the North late in the summer.

Cards have been received here announcing the birth of a son to the Swiss Minister and Mme. Ritter, on October 26, at Zurich. The infant has been named Kurt Ludwig Edward. Mme. Ritter and her young son will arrive here late next month.

The First Secretary of the United States Embassy at St. Petersburg and Mrs. Post Wheeler, the latter known in the literary world as Hallie Ermine Rives, who are visiting in Washington, were the guests of honor at luncheon yesterday of former United States Minister to Morocco and Mrs. H. Percival Dodge, who have recently come to Washington to make their permanent home.

Mr. Dodge was connected with the United States Embassy at Tokyo at the time Mr. Wheeler was a member of its staff, and during which time Miss Rives and Mr. Wheeler were married. Just after that Mr. Dodge was made Minister to Morocco, and later Mr. Wheeler was transferred to the embassy at St. Petersburg, where he is now stationed. Mrs. Wheeler's old home, "Castle Hill," in Virginia, is visited by her father and other relatives, but will return to the New Willard for a time before they sail for Russia to return to Mr. Wheeler's post of duty.

Mrs. Hill, wife of David Jayne Hill, American Ambassador to Germany, left Berlin yesterday for Paris, where she will remain until the new establishment of the Hills in the Rauschstrasse is ready for occupancy. Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Auchincloss, of New York, whose marriage took place a few days ago in Attleboro, Mass., have arrived in Washington and joined Mrs. Auchincloss' daughter, Miss Marie Duray, at the family residence, the Pierre Lorillard house, in Hillary place. Mrs. Auchincloss, as Mrs. Guidet-Duray, came to Washington two years ago, after a prolonged absence in Europe, and at once attained a leading position in society. She presented her eldest daughter to society last season and entertained lavishly. She also took an active part in the amateur theatricals of which Mrs. A. C. Barney was the inspiration and guiding spirit, and which were given with such signal success last winter for charity.

Until her recent return from Europe it was her intention to reside permanently in Washington. She has now decided, however, to remove to New York, and will give up her residence in Hillary place. ## HOLY NAME SONS PASS IN REVIEW the schedule of the trains for more than thirty minutes, and at one point of the proceedings the chief marshal had almost abandoned hope of having the delegation from the International City in line. The afternoon had just reached its zenith when the magic words "Here they come!" flashed down the Avenue. A bodyguard of automobiles preceded the procession and served to clear the pavements of the crowds.

Head of the Line.

A squadron of mounted police followed, and then the hearts of the waiting throngs were gladdened by the sight of flying banners and a long line of marchers, headed by the chief marshal and his aids, with Rev. Edward Fitzgerald, O. P. of New York City, and Rev. J. P. Meagher, O. P., spiritual director of the Holy Name Society of the District of Columbia.

The fifty aids to the chief marshal, with the color bearers, P. T. Niland and James D. Flynn, were in line with the officers of the Holy Name Union of Washington. The band of the Second Regiment, District of Columbia National Guard, headed the parade.

Baltimore Honored.

Baltimore, 2,000 strong, was given the place of honor and was assigned to the first division. The marshal was Dr. J. B. Gorman, and six of the most prominent Catholic parishes of the Maryland metropolis were represented.

Their marching was almost military in its precision, and the platoons presented an even, balanced effect, which called forth the cheers of the crowd. Directed following them was St. Mary's Society of Alexandria, of which William Desmond was marshal, and St. John's Society of Frederick, of which Rev. Father W. J. Kane was marshal. The appearance of the visitors elicited compliments from the spectators along the entire line of march.

The second division was composed of the members of St. Cyprian's parish, 700 strong. The members brought their own band, and its rendering of religious and martial airs was excellent. This parish had the largest representation of any Washington church in the procession, and it acquired itself with high honor. E. Brown was marshal.

Soldiers' Home Parish.

The third division saw the procession in full swing. With Freshner's Band leading, St. Joseph's parish, with Richard J. Curtin marshal, followed. Then came the Holy Name parish delegation, William T. Kelly being marshal. The sturdy veterans of the Soldiers' Home parish, about fifty strong, were next in line.

The sight of the hoary, venerable soldiers, their shoulders bowed with the weight of years, but their spirit still proud and vital, was the signal for cheering from the enthusiastic crowds.

The fourth division, headed by Menard's Band, was composed of the following: St. Martin's parish, with M. J. Shea as marshal; St. Anthony's parish, with W. J. McCloskey as marshal; St. Matthew's parish, with Thomas R. Huyek as marshal, and St. Stephen's parish, with Harry Crompton as marshal.

With the First Regiment Band, of the District National Guard leading, the fifth division was composed as follows: St. Peter's parish, with George F. Davis as marshal, and the Holy Comforter parish, with William L. Kuehl as marshal.

In the sixth and final division were St. Dominic's and St. Vincent de Paul parishes, with Michael Shrugue as marshal. The Soldiers' Home Band, with Prof. Zimmerman as leader, was at its head.

Parishes All on Hand.

It was a fact noted by many that not a single parish failed to contribute a large delegation as it had promised, and many were far larger than was at first thought possible. The first estimates of the numbers of the marchers were, therefore, revised, and it is now believed there were more than 6,000 in line.

The line of march embraced B street northwest from East Capitol street, Pennsylvania avenue to Fifteenth street, thence past the White House to Seventeenth street, and to the Monument grounds.

Parade All Over.

Beckoning his aids to the small platform which had been erected for the occasion on the Monument grounds, Chief Marshal Halligan declared the parade over at 4:30 o'clock. In the next twenty minutes, while the marchers were breaking line, a huge throng massed on the grounds for the closing exercises. It was perhaps the largest open-air meeting of a religious order ever held in the Capital.

Rev. Father P. J. Meagher, of St. Dominic's, presided, and called upon Rev. Edward Fitzgerald, of New York City, formerly of Washington, to express the general view of the event.

"There is an inspirational side to this event which should be emphasized," said Father Fitzgerald. "By the great parade you have given a public expression and a public avowal of your Christian faith. You have declared your allegiance to Jesus Christ."

"On the historic Avenue, where many a magnificent peasant has been held, you have marched to-day in the cause of keeping the name of God free of blasphemy and profanity. I cannot but think of that great march forty-five years ago, when the returning Union soldiers paraded in victory down this same boulevard."

"We are here in sight of the beautiful White House, where lives the Chief Executive of this nation, chosen by a vote of the people. We express our faith not only in our religion, but in the destiny of this republic. We know it rests upon authority, for without authority recognized by the people, there is nothing without which we may look for rapine, disorder, disintegration."

Lay View Set Forth.

The lay view of the procession was ably expressed by Michael I. Weller. Mr. Weller said: "Reverend clergy, ladies, and gentlemen: Here, at the nation's Capital, on the banks of the majestic Potomac, in the shadow of the monumental shaft erected in honor of our immortal patriot, George Washington, this great Catholic demonstration of the Holy Name societies has been appropriately inaugurated, upon this Sunday afternoon, to give living and forcible expression to our faith in the Son of God and our firm determination to be constantly reminded of the respect due to His holy name, with the fervent pledge that our lives shall always conform to His admonitions."

An Eventful Day.

"Standing upon the soil, that was formerly part of dear Maryland, settled by our Catholic pilgrims, it may be permissible to recall that eventful day, March 25, A. D. 1634, when the Ark and the Dove, conveying 200 souls, sailed up the broad Potomac and under the leadership of Gov. Leonard Calvert, upon landing, founded the first English colony in America, that had civil and religious liberty as its basis, where Catholic and Protestant met amicably and legally upon equal footing, and where those, persecuted in other colonies on account of their religious views, were accorded a welcome asylum and granted every political and social privilege enjoyed by the original settlers. The beneficent seed of toleration or liberty of conscience planted in Maryland, encountered many vicissitudes, yet in due time, by the grace of God, it has expanded to every part of our beloved country."

"To-day we tender a heartfelt welcome to you, our brothers from Virginia and Maryland, and rejoice that you have united with us, upon this epoch-making occasion."

Henry an Example.

"Virginia furnished a noble son, Patrick Henry, by whose unceasing efforts religious slavery was forever banished from its soil, inspiring an incentive to George Washington, Thomas Jefferson, and James Madison, culminating in 1787 with the adoption of the United States Constitution at the Philadelphia convention, which glorious instrument guaranteed religious freedom as well as political liberty to every one, owing allegiance to the Star Spangled Banner. Maryland had her Carrolls and other patriots, to blazon with fame her pages of history during the same period, who valiantly assisted old Virginia in the noble cause of justice to all mankind."

A Catholic Colony.

"We, the District of Columbia Catholics, beg to call attention to some historical facts that should not be allowed to sink into oblivion, viz, that our territory is part of the Catholic colony of Maryland; that it was named in honor of the Catholic discoverer—Christopher Columbus; that the city of Washington was planned by the Catholic, Maj. Charles Pierre L'Enfant; that its White House was designed and constructed under the care of the Catholic architect, James Hoban, who also supervised the early construction of the United States Capitol upon land contributed by the Catholic, Daniel Carroll, of Duddington; that our first mayor was the Catholic, Robert Brent, appointed mayor in 1822 by President Thomas Jefferson, and who was reappointed annually until 1832; that the Catholic, Daniel Carroll, of Upper Marlboro, the statesman of the Revolutionary period, was selected by President George Washington to serve as commissioner for the city of Washington. These incontrovertible facts are mentioned with pardonable pride, in behalf of our beautiful metropolis, now sheltering nearly 350,000 residents within its boundaries, nor should it be forgotten that it is illustrated by George Washington, the intimate friend of saintly John Carroll, our first Catholic bishop, paid a deserved tribute to Catholics when he said, in reply to their address: "And I presume that your fellow citizens will not forget the patriotic part which you took in the accomplishment of their revolution and the establishment of their government."

Increase Twelvefold.

"A retrospective glance for a century is quite instructive. According to the United States census of 1810, the population of the United States was 7,239,881 souls (all that part of the District of Columbia excepted), including Washington City, Georgetown, and the County of Washington, had 15,471 inhabitants; the estimated number of Catholics then in the entire country was less than 100,000 adherents. It is expected to prove by the census of 1910 that the total population will have increased over twelvefold. Compare this increase, flattering as it may seem to our national esteem, with the marvelous result of the growth of Catholicity—only 100,000 in 1810, contrasted with 15,000,000 loyal followers of our old church in 1910. Then we were a little over 1 per cent of residents; now fully 17 per cent. This steady and remarkable progress can be attributed to the apparent cause that here in America we are blessed with that ideal condition, a defined separation of church and state, each independent of control by the other, each supreme in its own sphere; the church, unhampered by oppressive laws, at liberty to perform its divine mission without interference from the state, it exists and flourishes as a free church in a free country."

"America established a precedent that other nations might emulate to their great advantage. Here, every individual enjoys the greatest degree of liberty in matters of conscience, living in terms of unity with his neighbor, irrespective of difference of belief, and is entitled to fill any position of political prominence, as he is protected by the constitutional clause which provides 'that no religious test shall ever be required as a qualification to any office or public trust under the United States,' while another clause recites: 'Congress shall make no law respecting an establishment of religion, or prohibiting the free exercise thereof.'"

Years Pass Away.

"Two hundred and seventy-six years have now rolled over since that small company of Catholic pilgrims left England, braving the dangers of the deep, in the wintry season, on small, fragile vessels, for conscience sake, to found a new permanent home on these shores; that and their co-religionists of other races, who followed them, have borne themselves with credit is conceded by every impartial historian; their deeds speak eloquently for the cause we advocate—loyalty and devotion pro Deo et Patria."

"Let us then, conclude by sending a message of affectionate greeting and congratulations across the Atlantic to our venerated leader and father, Pope Pius X, the prisoner of the Vatican, from his faithful children, gathered in mass meeting, at the Capital of the great American republic."

Benediction Given.

The concluding exercise was a benediction by the papal delegate, Diomedeo Falconio. Privately, the papal delegate expressed himself as being highly pleased with the day's exercises, and hopes that the parade will be repeated.

There were congratulations all around last night over the success of the event.
